BEAUTY COLLAPSES AT MURDER TRIAL

FACTOR SURRENDERS TO FACE $7,000,000 SWINDLING CHARGE

"Jake The Barber" To Face Extradition To England

CHICAGO, May 20.—John "Jake the Barber" Factor surrendered today to federal authorities today on the charge that he engineered a confidence game which is alleged to have swindled English investors of $7,000,000.

As soon as Factor appeared with his attorney at the office of the United States marshal he was served with a warrant seeking his extradition to London to face the confidence game charges pending there.

Factor and his alleged accomplices, two of whom are under arrest in the east, have been quietly sought for months by federal agents and detectives from London's Scotland Yard.

It was not until the former barber's expensive suite in an exclusive Gold Coast apartment building was raided last Friday that the public knew of the search.

Factor's attorneys dickered with federal authorities for several days, seeking assurance that their client would be admitted to bail pending a hearing on extradition procedure.

United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker refused to make any guarantee that bail would be allowed until Factor was surrendered. Prosecutors said they believed the prisoner might legally be entitled to bail.

It was expected that Godfrey Haggard, British consul general, at whose request the warrant for Factor's arrest was issued, would urge federal officials to set high bail for the prisoner, probably as high as $100,000.

When he appeared at the federal building with Attorney Arthur L. Schwartz, a law partner of United States Senator Ohio F. Glenn, Factor insisted he was innocent of the charges against him. He was neatly attired in grey.

"I have no statement to make at this time," he said, "except to say that all I have read about myself in the past few days is absolutely false.

The statements about me and members of my family which have been maliciously circulated are utterly without foundation. I have appeared voluntarily because I knew that the charges made against me are untrue. The members of my family have been made to suffer through these false allegations.

The attitude of the British authorities is that I should be placed in jail and denied any opportunity to defend myself against this persecution. I am here to squarely meet the charges which have been made against me, but I feel that my constitutional right to bail should not be denied.

"I know that upon a hearing I will vindicate myself of all charges. Until the opportunity to defend myself has been accorded me I sincerely trust that my friends will defer their judgment."

WILL ASK SANITY TEST FOR SLAYER

NEW LEXINGTON, O., May 20.—Attorneys today laid plans to demand a sanity hearing for Gerald Miller, 22, following action by a grand jury yesterday in returning two first degree murder indictments against him, charging him with the deaths of Mrs. Pauline Crosson and William Lardier, both of Columbus.

Miller will be arraigned Monday, it was said. Authorities declare he admitted murdering Mrs. Crosson, "because she snubbed him," and Lardier, "because he wouldn't go to war."

Miller killed the two with a shotgun near here last week, he is said to have admitted. He was formerly an inmate of the Columbus State Hospital and attorneys will ask that he be committed to the Lima Hospital for the Criminal Insane.

CONVICT PHYSICIAN

LONDON, O., May 20.—Dr. C. Riche, a Springfield physician, stood convicted of perjury here today. A jury found him guilty of giving false testimony in trials of John Duffy, 21, convicted Springfield robber. Attorneys planned to file a motion for new trial.

SURE SHE SHOT HIM

Jealousy is believed by Cleveland police to have been the motive for the shooting of Robert Firestone, 29, by his "girl friend," Irene Davey, 22 years old and red-haired. "Sure I shot him," police say Irene told them. "I don't care whether or not he lives. I'd just like to get my hands on his new girl friend." The girl alleges Firestone threw acid on her during a quarrel. Firestone was reported near death.

OHIOAN VICTIM OF SWINDLING GANG

FLINT, Mich., May 20.—W. D. Carlyle, of Martins Ferry, Ohio, was swindled out of $17,000 by the same swindlers who molested the Prince of Wales and other notables of huge sums, it was learned for the first time here today.

Carlyle, it is understood, is now enroute to Philadelphia in an attempt to identify the alleged swindlers under arrest there.

Chief of Police James E. Fredrickson revealed that Carlyle had been "taken for $17,000." The man told police chief that he was victimized in Hamilton, Ohio.

TWELVE RESCUED FROM BLAZING CLEVELAND APARTMENT HOUSE

CLEVELAND, May 20.—Two persons were rescued from a blazing East Side apartment house here today in one of four fires which police believe were started by a firebug, who has been active in the East Side section of the city in the past six months.

Mr. and Mrs. John Stryzinski, trapped by the flames in the second story of the apartment building, were carried to safety by firemen. Four other tenants escaped from

SENATE COMMITTEE HITS STATE OFFICE COMMISSION WORK

Ordinary Business Practices Forgotten Probers Find

COLUMBUS, O., May 20.—Ordinary precautions used in the business world from the standpoint of economy and ordinary business judgment "have been forgotten" in connection with the construction of the new state office building here, members of the special senate committee which recently completed an investigation, charged in a report made public today.

"There seems to be a feeling that in the expenditure of public funds, the amount available is unlimited and the ordinary dictates of prudence and caution are disregarded," the report declared.

The senate committee which returned the report after being empowered by the senate to probe all matters dealing with the selection of the site for, and the construction of, the office building, was composed of Senators C. J. Anderson (Republican) of Shelby, chairman; Walter G. Nickels (Republican) of New Philadelphia; Nils P. Johnson (Republican) of Youngstown; Paul P. Yoder (Democrat) of Dayton; and Louis J. Eberle (Democrat) of Nelsonville.

At least $600,000 additional will be necessary to complete the building for occupancy "after the exercise of the most rigid economy from now on," the committee found.

This amount is in addition to the $5,010,000 appropriated by the state legislature two years ago for a site and structure and is without any provision for heating of the building or supplying it with electric power.

The committee's report, which was submitted to the senate this afternoon, found, however, that there was "no indication whatsoever of dishonesty or misappropriation of funds."

"But we must conclude," the report added, "that the commission, from the outset, did not stay within the appropriation made, did not provide for the financing of the remodeling of the state house and other necessary improvements and encumbered all funds available in the new office building alone."

Members of the state office building commission, who felt the sting of the committee's charges, were Carmi A. Thompson of Cleveland, chairman; William Green of Co. Co. and Washington D. C., president; and the American Federal

EXPECT GRATE CASE TESTIMONY SOON

COLUMBUS, O., May 20.—With the task of selecting a jury almost completed, opening arguments of the state were expected to be started sometime today in the trial of Clinton Grate, 31, the convict charged with starting the disastrous Ohio penitentiary fire that cost 322 lives a year ago.

Prosecutor Donald J. Hoskins, who obtained a grand jury indictment against Grate charging him with first degree murder and arson after receiving the prisoner's alleged confession that he lighted a candle in an unfinished cell block, expected to make the opening statements against the prisoner.

LINDBERGH OBSERVES ANNIVERSARY OF ATLANTIC OCEAN SOLO FLIGHT AT WORK

NEW YORK, May 20.—An automobile, carrying a tall blond young man, will whirl over the highways between Princeton and New York City today. Up hill and down dale, past blossoming farms and orchards, it will speed along until slowed by New York traffic.

Four years ago today a silver grey monoplane lifted heavily from Roosevelt Field and started the same young man on his famous flight through fog and wind over the vast Atlantic to Paris.

Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh said he planned merely a day of work in celebration of his flight, the first solo and first non-stop dash from the United States to Europe. He will motor here from his country home near Princeton and spend the day in conference with officials of air transport systems, of which he is technical advisor.

WOMAN SAVED ALIVE AFTER WALL FALLS; TWO OTHERS KILLED

General Dunlap Of Marines Crushed To Death In France

CINQ MARS LA PILE, France, May 20.—Buried for more than twenty-four hours by the collapse of a wall that killed her husband and Brigadier General Robert H. Dunlap of the United States Marine Corps, Mme. Denis Briand, a domestic, was found alive by rescue workers at the Chateau Farniere today.

Despite the fact General Dunlap and Briand were instantly killed, Mme. Briand was believed to have escaped with only minor injuries. The wall collapsed while Mme. Briand was feeding cattle on the grounds of the Chateau Farniere, now converted into a pension and at which General Dunlap and his wife were guests. The general and Briand, hearing the woman's cries, rushed to her rescue, but were immediately trapped by a miniature avalanche that followed the collapse.

General Dunlap's body and that of Briand were found after an all night search by a battalion of French engineers, aided by tanks and tractors. It was lying face downward in the dirt and his head was crushed. Physicians who examined the body said death undoubtedly was instantaneous.

Throughout the night, the voice of Mme. Briand was heard at intervals, spurring the searchers to renewed efforts. She did not realize, rescue workers said, that the courageous general and her husband were dead beneath the rock and earth only a few feet away from where she lay.

Doctors declined to reveal the extent of Mme. Briand's injuries, but they were believed to be of a minor nature. How she escaped immediate death or suffocation when tons of earth and stone fell on top of her was a mystery.

The body of General Dunlap, the youngest brigadier in the U. S. M. C., was taken to Tours immediately after his recovery. Mrs. Dunlap, who witnessed her husband's death and stood vigil throughout the night while workers labored to extricate the victims, was prostrated with grief.

ATTEMPTS TO SPEED UP TAXATION WORK LAUNCHED IN HOUSE

Income And Sales Tax Most Likely To Be Favored

COLUMBUS, O., May 20.—Rumblings of dissatisfaction, portending a possible open revolt, over the snail's pace with which the taxation program is progressing, filtered from the house of representatives in the state legislature today.

Although the assembly has been in session nine days now, there have been no evidences of a definite taxation scheme evolved. As one commentator put it, "they seem to still be beating around the bush." Demanding that an effort be made to "speed things up," Representative L. R. Bostwick (Republican) of Madison County, asserted today that a questionnaire is being prepared for circulation among house members for the purpose of determining the sentiment of the representatives toward the various taxation measures.

Other representatives expressed similar attitudes, while the house taxation committee frankly confessed its inability to make any headway unassisted in its study of the bills.

Meantime, prediction was made that the house will pass an income tax bill along with the intangible tax measure and possibly a sales tax bill. This, it seemed, may constitute the sum total of the taxation program that will be enacted by the house at the present session.

BAPTISTS ELECT

DAYTON, O., May 20.—Principal officers of the Ohio Baptist convention succeeded themselves today following an annual election at their meeting here. Rev. Millard Brelsford of Cleveland, was named president again and S. W. Hamblin of Granville, was re-elected treasurer.

YIELDS TO EMOTION DURING TESTIMONY CONCERNING DEATH

Defense Scores In Stories Of Opening Witnesses

NICE, France, May 20.—Weeping hysterically, Mrs. Charlotte Nixon-Nirdlinger, former St. Louis beauty contest winner, collapsed in the prisoner's box in the little courtroom at Aix-en-provence today at the opening of her trial for the fatal shooting of her husband, Fred G. Nixon-Nirdlinger, theatrical magnate of Philadelphia and Baltimore.

The former "Queen of Beauty" gave way to emotion while recounting how she fired the shots that ended her husband's life in their apartment on the fashionable Promenade Des Anglais here six weeks ago.

"I can't remember what did happen when my husband grasped my throat," she cried, after accusing Nixon-Nirdlinger of attacking her in a fit of violent jealousy. She sank her head in her arms on a table in front of her chair and sobbed bitterly.

Charged with "murder with provocation," Mrs. Nixon-Nirdlinger attempted to show she had shot her husband in self-defense, but told the court she could not remember clearly how the tragedy had occurred.

Judge Herwards, the examining magistrate, subjected the beauty to a barrage of questions concerning her married life with the Philadelphia millionaire. He ridiculed her contention that Nixon-Nirdlinger was insanely jealous with questions concerning her own behavior, but remarked that an investigation of her morals had resulted in her favor.

"Did you and your husband lead separate lives?" the judge asked. "If not, why did you always go dancing and neglect your home and your children?"

Stiffing her emotion, Mrs. Nixon-Nirdlinger indignantly denied the inference that she had a lover. "Then why?" asked the judge, "did your husband accuse you. Why was he so jealous?"

To these questions, Mrs. Nixon-Nirdlinger could only shake her head. Pale and tired—hardly

SELECT GENEVA FOR DISARMAMENT MEET

GENEVA, May 20.—Geneva, traditional site of important international deliberations, today was selected by the League of Nations council as the site of the general disarmament conference to be convened in February, 1932.

The decision was reached by unanimous vote. Prior to selection of the site, the German delegation proposed the drawing up of a detailed questionnaire giving the actual armament of all nations for use at the conference. The proposal was turned down after objections by M. Markinkovich of Yugoslavia, who pointed out that the recent London naval disarmament conference "dealt with necessities instead of statistics."

BREAKING THE ICE

NON-UNION MINERS IN OHIO FIELD STRIKE AGAINST CUT

ATHENS, O., May 20.—Protesters here today would be paid forty cents instead of forty-five cents a ton and that pay of day laborers would be reduced from $3.75 and $4 a day to $3.52 and $3.74.

Objecting to the reduction, the strikers demanded that wages instead be raised.

The mine is controlled by the Staite-Exxon Co. of Columbus and ordinarily provides employment only two or three days a week.

FAMED CARICATURIST FOUND DEAD; POLICE FIND FAREWELL NOTE

BLAMES "COLLEGE"

The lure of fine clothes took Loyce McCormick, 21-year-old Kansas City, Mo., girl, above, from a job as a stenographer to a "college of crime" where she "enrolled" under the instruction of "a professor" who operated a select school in banditry for women.

According to her story to police, she was arrested after kidnapping the wife of Ed Patrick, one of the "professor's" victims, police say.

AUTOIST KILLED IN COLLISION ON PIKE

EARLY WEDNESDAY FACULTY OF O. S. U. REVERSES OPINION ON ARMY TRAINING

Six Others Injured When Autos Crash Head-On

One man was killed instantly, three women and three men were injured, none seriously, in a head-on auto collision on the Three-O highway between Selma and South Charleston, a mile north of Selma, in Clark County, at 9 o'clock Wednesday morning.

The dead man is Hilton D. Straw, about 25, Cincinnati, traveling salesman for the John R. Evans Co., Cincinnati shoe manufacturing concern, who suffered a broken neck and numerous fractures.

The injured: Mrs. Elizabeth Ernst, 70, of 239 Atwood St., Gallon, O., possible fracture of an arm, bruises and abrasions.

Mrs. Dorothy Ryan, 54, Harvey, Ill., cuts and bruises.

Mrs. Dorothy Wissel, 31, Harvey, Ill., cuts and bruises.

M. J. Ryan, 58, and his son, Simon, 22, escaped with scratches.

C. E. Becker, Jr., Cincinnati, minor injuries.

Straw, occupant of an auto driven by Becker, died instantly and his body removed in an ambulance of Melvin McMillan, cadaverille funeral director, to the Sprague funeral home at South Charleston.

Neither machine upset. Becker was driving toward South Charleston and the sedan occupied by Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Ryan, their son, Simon, their daughter, Mrs. Wissel and Mrs. Ernst, sister of Ryan, was en route to Cincinnati. The daughter was driving.

The three injured women were removed to Springfield City Hospital in ambulances. The injuries of the men being of a minor nature, they were not admitted to the hospital.

Illustrator Recently Divorced In Paris By Fourth Wife

NEW YORK, May 20.—Ralph Barton, famous illustrator, was found dead today with a bullet wound in his head in his Manhattan apartment. Detectives of the East 51st Street station said he had committed suicide.

Barton, known throughout the world for his caricatures, was 39 years old. Police said a .25-caliber revolver had been used.

Barton was born in Kansas City, Mo., the son of Abraham Pool Barton and Catherine Josephine Wigginton Barton. After studying in Kansas City public schools and under private tutors, young Barton went to Paris to study art.

He became a well-known contributor to American magazines and won noteworthy attention from art critics with his sketches and caricatures. He also was the dramatic editor of the humorous publication "Life," author of several books, and illustrated the volume "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes."

He was decorated by the French government in 1927 with the Chevalier Legion d'Honneur.

The caricaturist was divorced by his fourth wife in Paris exactly one month ago today.

The divorce was obtained by the former Germaine Tailleferro, Parisian artist, whom Barton married in 1926.

He returned only recently from Paris. He went abroad a few years ago renouncing America because of what he termed "the hypocrisy of prohibition" in this country.

Barton's third wife was Carletta Monterey, actress, who divorced him shortly before his fourth marriage. She now is the wife of Eugene O'Neill, noted playwright.

Few details of the suicide could be learned. Detectives said Barton left a note. They also said that nobody except "a certain girl" could be admitted to the Barton penthouse apartment which is atop the fifth floor of an E. Fifty-seventh St. building.

Three persons have ended their lives in the apartment house during the past six months, police say.

Votes To Disapprove Demand To Drop Military Work

COLUMBUS, O., May 20.—Turning "about face" on its previous stand, the faculty of Ohio State University today prepared to transmit to the institution's board of trustees with its disapproval the petition signed last week by more than 600 students demanding that military training be made optional instead of compulsory for freshmen and sophomores.

The faculty reached its decision to disapprove optional student "army work" in a special two and one-half hour meeting last night. The vote on the question was 144 to 9. A week before, by a vote of 131 to 64, the faculty voted to recommend that the trustees make military training optional.

The university's board of trustees convened today for its May meeting, when the faculty-disapproved student petition will be submitted.

Faculty members declined to discuss the change of attitude regarding military training as a part of required university work. The action followed, however, the introduction of a resolution in the state legislature, convening here, calling for a legislative investigation of the attempt to abolish military training at the institution.

"If it is an attempt to destroy one of the most economical, beneficial and efficient elements of national defense," the resolution, prepared by Representative Julius W. Headington (D) of Mt. Vernon, stated, "we want to know who is trying to do it and why."

PRINCIPALS IN MAY QUEEN FIGHT

Akron (O.) University students will be a long time in forgetting the 1931 election for May Queen which has resulted in the indefinite suspension of Ray Bliss, above, campus "politician," and the penalizing of Ellen Palmer, left, May Queen candidate and a senior, and Agnes McGowan, right, a sophomore. Faculty action was taken because of alleged "ballot stuffing." Bliss attempted to shoulder all the blame for the affair, although he declared his action was no confession of wrongdoing. Both girls will be requested to do eight hours extra work before they are graduated.

Farm Notes

BORDEAUX PLUS CALCIUM ARSENATE EFFECTIVE IN FLEA BEETLE CONTROL

Potato flea beetle damage to the potato crop can be greatly reduced by including calcium arsenate in the regular spraying program, says H. L. Gul, assistant in Entomology at the Ohio Experiment Station.

In experimental potato plots at Wooster in 1930 it was found that the yield of plots sprayed nine times with 4-6-50 Bordeaux mixture, the first six applications containing calcium arsenate at the rate of 4 pounds to each 100 gallons of spray, was increased on an average of 28 bushels per acre over plots receiving Bordeaux alone. Where lead arsenate was used under the same conditions the average increase was 15 bushels. The value of the large number of arsenical sprays was demonstrated by the fact that where lead or calcium arsenate were included in the first three sprays only, the increase in yield was 5 and 10 bushels, respectively. In this experiment the first spray was applied when the plants were about 6 inches tall; spraying was repeated at weekly intervals until the plants began to die.

Throughout the series it was found by actual counts that large number of beetles and, consequently, a large number of feeding punctures were present on all low producing plots, and there were relatively few on the plots where the yields were highest.

It is not only important that the spraying be frequent but that the work be done thoroughly. It is poor economy to attempt to make a quantity of spray material cover as large an acreage as possible since such a practice will not result in a complete coverage of the potato foliage. Flea beetles will then search out the parts of the plant not well coated with spray and damage will result. About 100 gallons per acre should be applied each time. A pressure of 300 pounds or more should be maintained at all times by the spray pump.

The work in 1930 was done on Cobler potatoes and when Russets or other late varieties are grown it may be profitable to continue the use of the arsenical in eight or more of the sprays applied.

Peggy Shannon Gets Star Role at Start

Illness of Clara Bow Catapults Red Haired Young Actress Into Part Assigned to "It" Girl.

Peggy Shannon, who arrived in Hollywood a week earlier from the Broadway stage to understudy Clara Bow, in "The Secret Call," received one of those breaks that beginners in the film world pray for. Through the nervous breakdown of the red-haired "It" girl of the movies, Peggy, who was born in Pine Bluff, Ark., and whose real name is Peggy Sammon, now fills the stellar role in the film production.

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., May 20.—For the second time within a few months, the ruthless hand of fate has injected itself into the stormy career of Clara Bow, noted "It" girl of the movies.

Worry over unsavory publicity which she received at the time of her case against her former secretary, Daisy Devore, Clara's illness, four months ago, cost her the leading role in a film production and skyrocketed Sylvia Sydney to fame. Again fate intervened, as Clara was rehearsing for the stellar part in "The Secret Call" she was stricken. Then opportunity knocked at the door of red-haired Peggy Shannon, who came here from the Broadway stage a week earlier.

Miss Shannon came under contract to Paramount to understudy Clara, so when the "Bow snapped" Peggy was catapulted to fame via the silver screen.

Today she is playing the part intended for Clara, while the latter is in a Glendale, Calif., sanitarium, suffering from a nervous breakdown. Physicians assert that Clara's condition is not serious.

Like Clara Bow, Miss Shannon has climbed the ladder of fame from Brooklyn, N. Y., to the movie colony. Born at Pine Bluff, Ark., she went to the "Big Town" in search of a career. After appearing in stock in Brooklyn, she started her Broadway career in the Ziegfeld "Follies" of 1922 and 1923. Later she secured a place in Earl Carroll's "Vanities."

She stayed on the legitimate stage until two weeks ago. Her last public appearance was with Ernest Truax in "Napi," in which she appeared in New York last spring.

Greene County ranked seventh among Ohio's eighty-eight counties in the recent state-wide high school scholarship contest, according to the state department of education. This county also stood first in tenth year English among cities, counties and exempted villages.

The highest grade made in the entire state, regardless of any classification, was credited to Mary M. McMillan, Cedarville High School student, in English II.

The Greene County Scholarship team was composed of these students: Lee Leiserson, John K. Webster, Evelyn Bonhaus, John Stewart, Granville Printz, Carl Ferguson, James Anderson, Janice Dunevant, John Richards, Dwight Correll, Donald Buehler, Lucille Pittstick, Perry Fletcher, Don John, Frances Thacker, Ervin Reeves, Harriet R. enour, Roberta Shaw, Annabel Dean, Gail Little, Winifred Luten, Frances Straley, Wendell Murphy, Christina Jones, Ruth Kimball, Mary M. McMillan, Elaine Knoop, Carmo Hostetter, Ruth King and Helen Fletcher.

The state department granted honors in the eighth grade test held April 4 to the following: Justin Hartman, Cedarville, and Ruth M. Glass, of Jamestown, were placed in the high 1 per cent of 55,000 pupils who took eighth grade test with Billie Samuel Evans, Bath Twp., and Hall Breden McElree, Central High School, Xenia.

"It is in connection with the giving of the Ten Commandments and Israel's acceptance of the role of law-giver and teacher that Reform Judaism has added the beautiful ceremony of confirmation to the observance of this day. Even as Israel of old accepted the Torah at Sinai so each generation takes its place in the unbroken chain of tradition and pledges allegiance to its faith."

"The agricultural background of the festival is retained through the custom of decorating the house of worship with green branches and flowers, and the reading of the Book of Ruth, while in the home dairy foods are served symbolizing Israel's joy in the Torah which is compared to 'milk and honey.'"

"With the return of the Jew to the soil in many places and the recurring symbol of Israel's acceptance of the Ten Commandments at Sinai in the confirmation ceremony, the Shabbath festival continues to have deep spiritual meaning today."

Confirmation services will be held at the Jewish Temple, Salem and Emerson Aves., Dayton, Friday.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Can a maid forget her ornaments, or a bride her attire? yet my people have forgotten me days without number. Why trimmest thou thy way to seek love? therefore hast thou also taught the wicked ones thy ways.—Jeremiah, II, 32, 33.

THE HEATHEN RULED

Some forty-two hundred years ago, things were in a mixed up condition in the fine city of Babylon and the Mesopotamian empire of which it had become the capital. The country was just getting over a period of devastating and upsetting war. Banditry was still common. Racketeering was prevalent. The administration of justice was far from being all it ought to be, and the powerful oppressed the weak when they could.

Hammurabi, who had emerged from the muck and murk of conflict monarch of all he surveyed and of considerable more, took cognizance of these conditions, strangely like some post war conditions with which we of today are familiar; and in drawing up his famous code handled the situation without any nonsense. The first regulations he laid down were these:

"If a man bring an accusation against a man and charge him with a capital crime but cannot prove it, he, the accuser, shall be put to death.

"If a man in a case pending judgment bear false threatening witness, and do not establish the testimony that he has given, if that case be a case of involving life, that man shall be put to death."

And the same principle was followed through in dealing with those who were found guilty of perjury or of efforts to "frame" in less serious cases. The crook who was caught with the goods while trying anything of the sort, got about what he was designing for his victim; and since Hammurabi was an extremely vigorous administrator and had determined that there should be some real justice in his dominions, there is reason to suppose that judges indulged in little foolishness while administering the law. Inane technical procedure is a modern blessing and connivance with crooks wouldn't have been very safe anyhow.

But it was when he tackled the problem of banditry that the head of the Babylonian state laid on the touch which has a peculiar appeal just at this moment. "If a man practice brigandage, that man shall be put to death," he ordained, and proceeded to promulgate this statute.

"If the brigand be not captured, the man who has been robbed shall, in the presence of God, make an itemized statement of his loss, and the city, and the governor in whose province and jurisdiction the robbery was committed, shall compensate him for whatever was lost."

In cases where life was lost, compensation was to be paid the heir of the dead.

That was in wicked, heathenish, Babylonia. In our advanced and enlightened time, if a person is robbed by a bandit, and maybe kidnapped and abused as a part of the process; or if he is shot down in cold blood and the thugs are not caught, why it is just too bad for the man or his heirs. Somebody decries about the difficulties in the way of waging a suppressive war on outlaws, and that's that, until somebody else is robbed or murdered, maybe a few hours later, by bandits who again get away with it. Whereupon the performance of picturing chagrin is repeated.

As to paying indemnity to a person who has contributed taxes in order to help support lawmakers, courts, prosecutors and police for a protection he does not get, the idea may have been all right four thousand years ago, in Babylon, but we can't think of doing anything of the sort.

Maybe not, but just the same, we think that the domains of the able Hammurabi were unhealthy hunting grounds for bandits after the ruler handed out his order, and cities and provinces found they must clean up or pay the costs. Suppose some such rule were in force today against Detroit and Michigan. Wouldn't the taxpayers make certain that the agencies of law enforcement were on the job day and night, and were equipped with everything necessary to enable them to be effective? You know they would.

THE DECLINE OF DISCONTENT

The minute jobs increase in Germany, according to the legal adviser of Berlin chamber of commerce, Dr. Fritz Demuth, who recently spoke in public, Adolf Hitler's political spurge "will become merely history. It is," said Dr. Demuth, "youth's discontent with an order which it blames for the widespread unemployment." Cannot a similar prophecy be made, with reasonable assurance, with respect to numerous other manifestations of discontent with the existing order of things in other countries than Germany?

The rise of the Hitlerites from 12 seats in the reichstag in 1928 to 107 seats in 1930 was meteoric—across the Rhine it was at first regarded as a portent; of ill omen; but already it has lost much of its power to alarm. Chancellor Brüning and the grim old president of the reich have done much to clip Adolf's wings, with the support of the preponderant Social Democrats and other moderate groups. Only the movement for customs union with Austria at all parallels anyone of the twenty-five planks in the fascist program for rescuing Germany from its present economic and political dilemma. The rest of this political crazy-quilt, which had been patched together from fascism, socialism and even bolshevism, was promptly rolled up by the reichstag and tabled.

A fundamental weakness of Hitlerism was its attempt to cover too much ground. The ingenious young inventor of its slogans made too many incompatible promises. Anything from tearing up the treaty of Versailles to socializing industry and expelling the Jews from Germany, which could attract another discontented element to his camp, was dangled before a section of the electorate which he hypnotized by his magnetic personality and the "apostolic fervor" of his acrobatic oratory. When it was discovered that in practice the oil of ultra nationalism could not be mixed with the water of communism people began to analyze his panacea, which they had swallowed before the last elections without question, and to find it not only fallible, but nonsensical.

The same process is going on in other countries. The serious dislocation of the world's economic structure by the war and its aftermath produced a depression that started people thinking; and as is usually the case after such upheavals, certain elements have carried their search for a remedy into impractical corners. Adversity breeds discontent and a desire for change. All the consequences of this artificially stimulated thought are not bad. Good may come from some of it. The froth will disappear with the result of normal conditions. The only danger is in permitting the extremists to mess up things so as to postpone or prevent the return of better times, when discontent will starve for lack of the thing that brings it into being and sustains it.

"Mary Garden quit grand opera cold and announced that she is going to tour Corsica on a mule. This is going to be worth watching. If there is a creature on earth more temperamental than a coloratura soprano, it is a Corsican mule."—Louisville Courier-Journal. And this is the last straw, to call "Our Mary" a coloratura soprano.

The limit of self satisfaction is reached by the individual who still believes that the universe was created to be a place in which man dwells himself.

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK, May 17.—The harp that Tom Moore strummed when he composed "The Last Rose of Summer" is now owned by a woman who answers to the name of Miller and who lives in the Bronx. Moore bequeathed the harp to a lad named Glover, in Dublin, back in—? and Glover passed it along to his granddaughter, the Miller lady.

UNCERTAIN FAME

The latest yarn rolling through the Lit'ry Volkstead Verelins of Tammany Town deals with two very sad pub-crawlers, recently discovered in a West 52nd Street Jin Joint weeping into their Fluid Extract of Hell and mumbling vague words about "fleeting fame."

They were Frederick Van de Water and William Soskin. Tearfully they pointed to a page in a current theatrical weekly which said that the book critics on the New York Evening Post were William Goskin and Frederic W. Can de Water.

RE CRIME CRUSHERS

With all the "experts" we have working to "stamp out" "organized crime" you'd naturally expect to see some results. Everywhere you look you see somebody "stamping." All you hear about the din of the automatic and the sawed off shotgun, is the steady thump, thump, thump of the "stamper."

And still "organized crime" flourishes like a wop speakeasy in W. 46th St.

We might get somewhere if a few of those who are making a life work of "stamping out" "organized crime" would turn their really engaging energy and undoubted talents to other fields, leaving the "stamping out of crime" to the one or two men with a faint glimmering of what it's all about.

The "stamping out of crime" is not wholly an exercise of the feet and legs as some of the professional "stamper" seem to believe. A little head-work in conjunction with the "stamping" is essential, while a smattering of education and a touch of aptitude, don't hurt any.

OH, THEODORE!

In the June Cosmopolitan Teddy (Slapper) Dreiser tells how he stole $25 from his employer to get a new overcoat and a hat so that he would more likely prove attractive to the girls.

He was driving a laundry wagon and filched the dough in collections. Before he could repay the sum which he had always intended to do (the last embezzler who started for Sing Sing said the same thing), his employer found out what Dreiser had done and discharged him.

"This experience," he writes, "was a lesson to me. Since that time never has temptation been so great—and more than once I have been at the point of starvation—as to make me take a dime that wasn't rightfully mine."

Between the two of them, I like the explanation of the paper-clip thief best:

"I'm an 'honest' man because I have a white liver."

SILVER QUESTION AGAIN ASSUMING IMPORTANCE AFTER LONG DORMANCY

(The first of a series of three articles dealing with the monetary question.)

WASHINGTON.—We may as well make up our minds to the silver question as a major politico-economic issue of the immediate and perhaps indefinite-continuing future.

It loomed out of next to nothingness so suddenly that it is hard to realize; nevertheless, here it is.

As a few of us, who are real old-timers, can remember, and as younger folk have heard, it was a tremendous issue during most of the 1890's, but petered out early in the 1900's and has remained so profoundly and uninterestingly dormant ever since, until very lately, that I do not think one need feel called on to apologize for having supposed it to be entirely dead.

Whatever the comparison with the times of today, the times of the first half of the 1890's were thoroughly awful.

The principal trouble, explained William Jennings Bryan, was our money shortage—gold, then as now, and not enough of it, the commoner stated emphatically. There was no more to be had, either, which was W. J.'s reason for wanting to fall back on silver, or an ampler supply. We simply had to have more money or there could be no improvement, he said.

However, silver was not adopted, after all. And times did improve.

Was W. J. mistaken? Or what? Economists who never had liked his ideas took the view that he was mistaken, but those who had agreed with him argued differently.

According to the Bryanites, the situation had been relieved by an unexpected, vast increase in the world's gold production—the Klondike discoveries in 1897, the opening of new South African fields and improved smelting methods, which permitted the recovery of much precious metal from previously unprofitable low-grade ore.

Anyhow, the business crisis passed. With it passed the demand for the dilution of the country's gold supply with silver, to provide more money.

Subsequent slumps were not bad enough to revive it—until this one. This time, to be sure, the gold shortage is not American. Between them the United States and France have considerably more than half of all the gold in existence.

The shortage is a world shortage; as part of the world, America feels it as acutely as if it were her own peculiar problem.

Such, at any rate, is the contention of economists who attribute the present international depression to an international money famine.

Of today's economists one of the foremost, by general recognition, is Commissioner Ethelbert Stewart of the labor department's statistical bureau. It is maybe a year or so since this shrewd old statistician, in the course of an interview relative to industry's difficulties, gave me what I no doubt should have recognized as a hint suggestive of a coming re-awakening of silver sentiment from its generation's slumber—though I fancy he himself scarcely intended as a so-called-to-be-fulfilled prophecy.

"The world's store of gold," he said, "is insufficient to serve as a basis for our epoch's money requirements."

The burst of production early in the twentieth century was not of long duration. For nearly three decades treasury reserves, taking them all into consideration, on an average, have increased slowly. Commerce in the same time has developed unprecedentedly.

"Gold having remained practically a fixed quantity, naturally its price has risen," continued the commissioner, "with the rapidly growing demand for it, to transact business in."

"Popularly expressed, the prices of the things money will buy have declined."

"Money is higher. It has been rising so much higher, and so rapidly, that its possessors have been able to make more by keeping it than they could make by putting it into any industry. If a gold certificate, locked up in a safe, is worth 20 per cent more at the end than at the beginning of a given year, its owner is not going to put it into any enterprise which will yield him only 10 per cent in the same year."

"Ultimately, of course," said the economist, "such a situation balances itself, industry again becomes more profitable than hoarding and money reappears for productive uses."

"Meanwhile, however, hard, tight times have prevailed."

"The man who has held his job at a rate of pay based on past prosperity, has benefited, for the cost of living has been low. Yet even his position has been insecure and others have suffered unemployment and want."

"The remedy for such a situation is more money in circulation, to make money unprofitable to hoard—but that's impossible if circulation is predicated upon a metal of which there is only a limited amount in existence or obtainable in the world."

"I don't even LIKE my husband any more as he drinks and isn't so hot as a provider. I knew he drank before, but I was foolish enough to think marriage cures all the faults of our boy friends."

"I still love a boy whom I then thought was a slow poke, but now I know how crazy I was. I don't know if he cares anything for me."

"Dear Miss Lee do you think if I should divorce my husband that a clean fellow would ever marry me? I was warned where marriage would lead, but I thought I knew it all. Now I know how dumb I was. Will that mistake ruin my life? If I stay with him I'll never be happy, and I'd surely hate to feel that I wouldn't have a chance again."

"Can one get annulment if she has children and get support for them? I would work myself but would have to get some money for them. My mother would take us back."

"DISCOURAGED ANN." Poor kid, you're not the only one by far who thought marriage was just a lark and found it was harsh reality. I would work myself but would have to get some money for them. My mother would take us back.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

By MRS. MARY MORTON

MENU HINT
Creamed Ham and Eggs Toast
Fresh Pineapple or Stewed Fruit
Whole Wheat Bread Butter
Oatmeal Cookies Milk

I am suggesting this menu for a luncheon—a home luncheon. The creamed ham and eggs allows you to finish up the odds and ends of ham and gives you a nourishing dish which may be served to the children. You may prefer to leave out some of the seasonings if you serve it to the youngsters, however.

Today's Recipes

Creamed Ham and Eggs.—Two tablespoons butter, two tablespoons flour, two cups evaporated milk, one cup baked ham, three hard-cooked eggs, one tablespoon Worcestershire sauce, dash celery salt, dash paprika, parsley. Prepare white sauce of butter, flour and milk. Add diced ham and let stand over hot water until ham is heated through. Add diced eggs, Worcestershire sauce and celery salt. More salt may be needed, but ham is usually salty enough to flavor the sauce. Serve on toast, add a dash of paprika and garnish with parsley.

Suggestions

Handy for Invalid
When serving meals to a sick person in bed, use a four-compartment relish dish. This saves room on the tray and also makes it look very attractive.

Clotheslin Bag

This bag consists of an ordinary clothes hanger and small cloth bag that will fit on hanger. A hole cut in one side with edges bound makes it easy to insert or remove pins. The bag is easily pushed along the line.

Picnic Sandwiches

One pound mild cream cheese, one pound dried beef, one can tomatoes. Put the cheese and dried beef through food chopper, cook tomatoes down to what will make a cup or more after it's strained. Mix same in the other ingredients till proper consistency to spread. Keep tomato juice to add in a day or two, when filling means thinning again. This amount makes 100 sandwiches. If you use one-quarter pound of each of the ingredients and a small can of tomatoes it makes 25 sandwiches.

Home Scheme for Cooling Air

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

WHAT this country needs is a moderate-priced cooling system for the average house.

The American home is marvelously equipped for most comforts. But considering the horrors of the American climate in summer, it falls down badly in this.

Our heating systems are wonderful. The whole house, rooms and hallways are kept at an even, comfortable temperature in winter, no matter how severe the weather outside. It was not always so. I remember my grandfather's house—the halls were the temperature of the North Pole, the sitting room that of equatorial Africa. Nor is it true of all countries. Winter in an English or French house is a horror not lightly to be endured.

But American summers, over most of the country, are far more severe and trying than our winters. It seems strange that our homes are not equipped with cooling apparatus as well as heating apparatus. I predict that the time for this is not far off. Engineers seem to understand how to do it. I saw a sound-proof room in a radio broadcasting station the other day; it was lighted with artificial sunlight, and ventilated with filtered air, constantly in motion, constantly at a temperature of 68, winter and summer. The musicians in the orchestra were more comfortable and healthier in that room than in their own homes. The ones that have hay fever are even free from it while in the room.

The scientific principle involved depends more on keeping the air in a room constantly in motion than in actual reduction in the air temperature.

But at that the American home in summer is so much better than it used to be that we should offer up praise and thanksgiving. Screens, plumbing, shower baths, refrigerators, electric fans and the sleeping porches have made a joyous revolution. Our ancestors modeled the homes they built in the new world on the ones they lived in in the old world. Not realizing that the American summer climate is nothing like the climate of Europe.

I saw an old photograph the other day of some pioneers in front of one of the old houses in my part of the world in summer. It made me shudder. The door and windows were wide open and the flies could almost be seen swarming in and out. The men wore black buckskin clothes (with vests) and most of them had heavy beards. The women were clothed from the wrists and ankles to the ears. Everybody had a palm leaf fan.

In those days you went to bed in a solid room with two windows, usually both facing the same direction. You crawled into bed under a heavy mosquito netting and often found that one or two mosquitoes had got in before you. All the cooling your food got was received from the temperature of the cellar. If you wanted to cool your skin you found some lukewarm water in a wash bowl and sponged your face and wrists.

Yes, things have changed miraculously for the better, but to make it complete, how about the inexpensive air-cooling ventilation system?

Runs Away To Be Married

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am a married woman, 21, and have two small children. I ran away at 17 to get married to have some fun, but it seems I didn't find much only trouble."

"I don't even LIKE my husband any more as he drinks and isn't so hot as a provider. I knew he drank before, but I was foolish enough to think marriage cures all the faults of our boy friends."

"I still love a boy whom I then thought was a slow poke, but now I know how crazy I was. I don't know if he cares anything for me."

"Dear Miss Lee do you think if I should divorce my husband that a clean fellow would ever marry me? I was warned where marriage would lead, but I thought I knew it all. Now I know how dumb I was. Will that mistake ruin my life? If I stay with him I'll never be happy, and I'd surely hate to feel that I wouldn't have a chance again."

"Can one get annulment if she has children and get support for them? I would work myself but would have to get some money for them. My mother would take us back."

"DISCOURAGED ANN." Poor kid, you're not the only one by far who thought marriage was just a lark and found it was harsh reality. I would work myself but would have to get some money for them. My mother would take us back.

Make Cheap Cosmetic Kit

By GLADYS GLAD

May use a strong cardboard box. Divide it off into small compartments with strips of heavy pasteboard, somewhat in the manner of a box for a sewing machine. Then procure some of those cheap little screw-top jars and bottles, fill them with your favorite preparations, and place them in the various compartments. If you want to "pretty-up" the kit you can cover the plain box with brightly colored or gaily designed paper.

Betty's complaint is, I'll admit, a just one. But the difficulty she mentions can be overcome. For any wise woman can plan a cosmetic kit that won't break her financially. She can, as a matter of fact, make the kit herself. All she must take into consideration is the length of her vacation period.

If your vacation trip is to be but a fortnight in duration, you can make a simple kit that rolls up, like one of those small manicuring kits. It will be sufficiently large to hold enough cosmetics for the entire two weeks. Use cardboard to give the kit body. Cover a straight strip of the cardboard, of whatever size you wish the kit to be, with a rubberized material, or a strong cotton fabric. Then fasten small pockets along one side of it, to accommodate your cold cream, astringent, toothpaste, hand lotion, mouth wash, and any other cosmetics that you might need.

You can purchase small-sized tubes and bottles of many well-known brands of cosmetic preparations in five and ten cent stores, and they will fit very well in the kit. Stock the kit with the preparations you need, roll it up, and fasten it with a strip of the material or in any other way you prefer.

If you are lucky enough to have a longer vacation, you will need a larger kit. For this purpose you

LEAGUE CHAMPIONS TAKE FIRST DEFEAT OF SEASON TUESDAY

Parish Team Victor In Overtime; Blanked
In Nightcap

Krippendorf-Dittman Shoe Co. defending American League champions, maintained its position at the top of the league heap by dividing a double-header with St. Brigid at Cox Field Tuesday night. After losing the first game, 7 to 8, Krippendorf blanked St. Brigid, 6 to 0, in the nightcap to earn an even break. The teams had previously played a 5 to 6 tie. The defeat Tuesday night were the first for each. Krippendorf had won three games in a row.

Fifteen innings were played in an hour and a half. The first game was scheduled for seven innings but an extra inning was necessary to decide the issue. After trailing all the game, the plucky little St. Brigid team rallied to score twice and tie the count in the last half of the seventh, then manufactured the winning run before a batter had been retired in the last of the eighth. An error and singles by Kennedy and Murray produced the winning margin.

Hornick, pitching for St. Brigid, held the opposition to eight hits, while his mates massaged Luttrell, Krippendorf hurler, for thirteen safeties.

Joe Fletcher essayed to pitch the second game for St. Brigid but was shelved from the mound and a hurry call was sent to Hornick. It didn't make much difference, however, who was pitching, because Luttrell, who also twirled the second contest for the league champions, was invincible this time, allowing nary a run and seven scattered hits, Krippendorf converted ten hits into six runs.

Anderson, St. Brigid left fielder, did a good job of fly-catching and led his team at bat in both games. He hit a home run and single in the first contest and two singles in the second. McCormick had a three singles in the first fracas. Christ and Anderson clouted homers for Krippendorf in the opening struggle.

In the aftermath, Christ got a double and triple, Luttrell a single and triple and Briley a homer and single. Haller, St. Brigid third baseman, provided the fielding feature in the second inning of the last game when he dived among the bleacher fans with one hand speared a foul fly from the bat of Jones.

The All-Stars and Central High had been scheduled to play a double-header, Tuesday night but the twin bill was postponed until Thursday night.

CEDARVILLE DEFEATS DAYTON U. SECOND TIME THIS SEASON

Rallying to score five runs in the last half of the ninth inning, Cedarville College's baseball team defeated the University of Dayton nine, 7 to 4 at Cedarville Tuesday afternoon, the second win for the Borermen over the Flyers this season.

Going to bat for the last time with the score standing at 4 to 2 in favor of Dayton, the Yellow Jackets staged a sensational rally, climaxed when Taylor, left fielder, hit a home run with two on base.

Garlough opened the final half of the ninth with a long fly on which Cavenny made a two-base muff. B. Turner singled, advancing the runner to third, from where he scored when LANG, Dayton catcher, pegged to second and Cleary, second baseman, failed to cover the bag. Turner went to third on the play and scored the run which tied the score on a neat bunt by Mills. Two other Cedarville players got on base, after which Taylor drove out his winning four-bagger.

"Hurricane" Turner, pitching for Cedarville, held the Flyers to five hits and fanned thirteen batters. Turner hurled Cedarville to a 4 to 3 victory over Dayton earlier in the season, on that occasion striking out fifteen batters. "Pope" Moyer pitched well for the Flyers, allowing only seven hits, but his support collapsed at times.

With a record of four victories and five defeats, Cedarville will defend a performance at Dayton in a return game at Wilmington Friday.

Garrett Wilson McClung, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ford McClung, Lexington, Ky., student at Phillips Exeter Academy, Andover, Mass. had planned to become an engineer but has shown such musical ability that he recently signed a year's contract with the Victor Phonograph Co. The youth's father is a former Xenian and is a brother of Mrs. Pearl Forsythe, E. Second St.

The boy's success in the musical field came as a complete surprise to his parents for the youth had never sung or played the piano while at home. Discovery of his voice was made by a representative of the Victor company who attended a performance at Boston of the school's presentation of Verdi's "Rigoletto" in which the youth played the part of the "Duke."

He was invited to make recordings which proved successful and was given the contract. His first recordings include "Song of Songs," "Ah! Sweet Mystery of Life," "L'Amour Toujours L'Amour" and "Serenade" from "The Student Prince."

Asking a divorce on grounds of gross neglect of duty, the plaintiff reveals he was a minor and under 21 years of age when he was married to the defendant May 7, 1929.

ADMINISTRATOR SUES

Nellie Bunch, residing at No. 3 Avon Apt., Wayne Ave., Dayton, and The American Guaranty Co., her bonding company, are named defendants in a suit filed in Common Pleas Court by Ralph Neeld, as administrator of the estate of Susan Mullen, deceased, who seeks a judgment for $688.66, allegedly due from the defendant as former executrix of the Mullen estate.

The administrator sets forth that following the death of Susan Mullen September 11, 1929, the defendant was named executrix and that she filed an account last September. Exceptions made to the accounting were sustained in part and overruled in part by Probate Court, which ordered her to pay $688.66 to the credit of the estate, it is claimed.

Upon her refusal to comply with the order, the court directed that she be removed as executrix, after which she resigned and he was appointed administrator, the plaintiff claims.

Disclosing that debts of the estate have not been paid and that the estate has not been fully administered, the plaintiff seeks to recover the amount adjudged due, either from the defendant, or the bonding company as surety on her bond. Miller and Finney are attorneys for the plaintiff.

FORECLOSURE ACTIONS

The Peoples Building and Savings Co. is plaintiff in two foreclosure actions filed in Common Pleas Court. One suit, seeking to recover $2,500 from Alva and Alice DeBolt, also names the following defendants who claim an interest in property which the plaintiff desires to have sold: Harry Kline, Blanche V. Kline and the Third Savings and Loan Co. The second action names Harry and Blanche Kline as defendants and the Third Savings and Loan Co. as co-defendant. Attorney C. W. Whitmer represents the savings firm in both cases.

FILES THREE SUITS

Three suits in which John T. Harbinger, Jr. is plaintiff are on file in Common Pleas Court. One action, seeking to recover $170.25, names James Dickerson, Fred Woodson and H. R. Hawkins as defendants; a second against Clarence and Ethel Hatfield and William Smith asks a judgment for $125, and a third against Albert and Bertha Gray requests foreclosure of a mortgage.

NOTE SUIT FILED

Suit to recover $142.92, alleged due on a note from H. E. Harden, Pauline Harden and George W. Daffern, has been filed in Common Pleas Court by The Williamson Heater Co., Cincinnati. Daniel Lang, the Home Building and Savings Co. and the Peoples Building and Savings Co. are named co-defendants. Foreclosure of a mortgaged property is asked. Morris D. Rice is attorney for the plaintiff.

WINS JUDGMENTS

The L. E. Mudd Co., Dayton, has been awarded two note judgments in Common Pleas Court, against James Wheeler for $112.68, and against George A. Fudge for $277.25.

Ball Yard Banter

"He was the greatest natural hitter I ever saw. What he would have done against the lively ball would have been a caution. This Speaker speaking and Tris is referring to none other than Shoeless Joe Jackson, one-time White Sox ace batsman."

"If Joe had been in the big league during the lively ball period," Spoke continues, "they would never have gotten him out."

"Babe Ruth has a powerful swing and perfect timing. He is a magnificent hitter. But he had to learn how. Joe didn't. Jackson just stepped up to the plate and socked the apple and he could slap it all over the field, not in just one direction."

"Remember, Jackson was hitting around .400 when times were toughest for batters."

"Pitchers were using all sorts of stuff on the ball. A batter had to swing at shiners, black-and-white, licorice, emery balls, sailers, a host of spitballs and all sorts of freak deliveries. It didn't make any difference to Joe. He hit everything."

"And when I say Joe could hit the ball anywhere I mean he could drive it as hard over third base as over first."

"Well, Joe's no longer in harness and we'll never know what he really would have done to that rabid ball if he had had a chance at it, coming down the alley to him, new and shiny. I sure would like to have seen him take a crack at it. What a ball player Joe was!"

Nice Li'l Feller

How would like to meet this gent in a dark alley? This physion is owned by Sergei Kalmikoff, Siberian wrestler, who is in the United States to display his wares. Sergei is 32 and has been wrestling 17 years without a defeat. He's after a match with Jim London, the champion.

Rainy weather has intervened to prevent the Red Wing Co. and the champion Lang Chevrolet Co. the only undefeated teams in local softball circles, from meeting in a scheduled National League game Wednesday night at Cox Field. This contest, for which fans have been waiting impatiently since the season began, was officially called off at noon Wednesday by the Softball Commission, due to wet grounds. Under the greenwood tree,
Who loves to lie with me,
And turn his merry note
Unto the sweet bird's throat,
Come hither, come hither, come hither:
Here shall he see
No enemy
But winter and rough weather.

Who doth ambition shun,
And loves to live i' the sun,
Seeking the food he eats,
And pleased with what he gets,
Come hither, come hither, come hither:
Here shall he see

CHAPTER 44

TWO WEEKS passed swiftly. Foster and Bonnie returned to New York. Even marriage could not curtail Foster's zeal for keeping his hand pretty well at the helm. Bonnie was reluctant at having to leave the tropics and return north at so miserable a season. The change in her, effected by two weeks of marriage, was astounding. She was sophisticated, automatic, imperious. The couple took a suite at one of the most exclusive hotels while they decided upon a house. Mary gasped at the mere thought of their daily expenses, which were more for the two of them than for the four Vaughns during the whole month.

Of course, she had known it would be like that—but the actual figures were something of a shock when she paid the accounts by check. Bonnie lounged about her rooms in elaborate negligees until time for lunch each day, then adorned herself in some stunning new wardrobe, and drove or shopped.

As she went around with her husband in his own circle, and met the younger members of that clique, she formed new attachments that completely ruled out the old ones. For awhile, she drove out to see her mother once a week; but as she became absorbed with her new interests and companions her visits at home were less frequent.

At first, Foster humored his wife's insatiable desire for excitement and entertainment. It afforded him a certain pride and pleasure to present his pretty wife to those who long had accepted him as a confirmed bachelor. But when that innovation had passed, and he had finished a busy day at the office, he began to desire the private seclusion of quiet evenings with Bonnie, as the charming little companion he had envisioned her.

They had been in New York for a fortnight when his disillusion began. Returning to the hotel one evening after an especially trying day with a bad market and many frantic appeals and protests from clients, he found Bonnie dressed for the evening in a shimmering, sequin-encrusted, backless, sweeping floor black model. An evening wrap lay across the chair ready to embrace her soft, gleaming shoulders.

"Do hurry, Ronnie," she greeted him impatiently. "Why did you stay at that office so late tonight? You know we are going to the Van Kidden's dinner-dance at the club."

He managed a weary smile. "Must we go? I should so much rather just spend the evening here with you, darling."

"Well, you may think that flatters me. But it doesn't. I'm all ready to go and we are late now, so get a move on, for heaven's sake."

"You look very sweet, Bonnie," still making no effort to rise from the chair where he had dropped with a sigh of satisfaction.

"Well, you don't need to think I'm dolled up for your personal benefit. What's the use of having swanky clothes if no one sees them, I'd like to know?"

"We've been out somewhere every night since we came back,"

he reminded her gently. Her disappointment and anger seethed. "Well, if you think I married you to sit home by the fire with you, Ronald Foster, you've got another guess coming. We are going to the club tonight," with finality.

He regarded her with mild surprise and his own disappointment and anger began to awake.

Bonnie observed the little frown of annoyance that waved his flag of warning, and changed her tactics. Her tone was cajoling as she flew over to him and clasped her arms about his neck.

"I'm sorry you are tired, dear. But I do want to go tonight so awfully much. Please, just this time—for me."

She won the family joust in this manner for some time thereafter, but he yielded with less grace on each occasion.

Besides, as Bonnie and her vivacity became more popular with the younger set of their clique, Foster soon found that he was more and more a bachelor again. Slim, sleek-haired youths claimed most of the dances with his wife, leaving him to the mercies of simpering dowagers as of old.

Christmas had followed immediately upon their return to New York. His gift to Bonnie was a handsome town car for her own use. The cost equalled Mary's salary for two years.

He presented Mary with a check for two hundred dollars. Ordinarily he would have made it only one hundred, but being her brother-in-law required a more liberal token of his appreciation.

Mary was grateful for the bonus and felt justified in accepting it. She had earned it, whether or not she was related by marriage to her employer. Yet she would have accepted no more, even on such terms.

The day of Christmas Eve was a quiet one on the market, so Mary left the office at market closing time. She had some last-hour purchases to make for the family's holidays. She always trimmed a tree for the boys and tried, in so far as she was able, to cover the list of their wants, like any father of a family.

Her demands became more expensive and difficult with each year, for they wanted everything they saw in the fascinating toy shops and which other youngsters had. Mary learned that as the world progressed with ingenious devices and mechanical living, the same progress reached into the realm of childhood and there was nothing lacking for them than the imagination could conjure.

Hurrying along the street in the early twilight, with white snowflakes swirling and zig-zagging about her like the rollicking spirit of holiday season, she checked over lists in her mind.

Even the grocery trucks that clanked and crunched along the icy streets, were festive with Christmas trees on their fenders. In the stores, the cranberries winked gleamed, rosy-cheeked apples glowed proudly, fuzzy wreaths opened red-circled mouths like lusty carolers and pleasant voices echoed "Merry Christmas!"

Mom had wanted Bonnie and her husband to come home for Christmas dinner, but a Christmas party at Foster's club left no doubt of choice in Bonnie's mind, whatever. So Mom and Mary and the boys would be alone for the day, Mary was absorbed in the task of trimming the tree on Christmas Eve, while Mom handed up ropes of tinsel and glittering ornaments to her for the top, when Bonnie and Foster stopped in, laden with silver-wrapped and red-ribbon-tied packages.

Mary wore an apron over her office frock and her hair was disarranged from scouting around the attic for the tree trimmings that were packed away from year to year. A dusty smudge decorated one cheek and her fingers were soiled. She was suddenly self-conscious when she felt Foster's keen eyes observing her untidy appearance. Bonnie's furtive quickness was a startling contrast. No wonder he had suddenly preferred Bonnie to her, she thought, ruefully.

Unaware of her embarrassment, however, Foster was thinking how like an angel of mercy she looked with the starry eyes that reflected the gleam of the silver star at the tip-top of the tree, and her busy, useful hands that always seemed to be doing something for someone. Bless her!

Bonnie arranged her gifts about the tree with the benevolent air of a very generous charity worker. She enjoyed her role of the munificent, wealthy relative.

"And what do you think Santa brought to me?" she inquired prettily, tucking her hand into her husband's arm and smiling up at him.

Neither of them attempted to guess. They both knew it could be most anything that money would buy.

"Look out the window," Bonnie suggested.

Mary and Mom, looked, saw the glinting motor car at the curb and exclaimed with pleasure, for Bonnie.

"I drove it over here alone, didn't I?" she consulted Foster, with the air of a happy child who has just been given exactly what she wanted.

Bonnie's gifts proved to be very expensive and practically useless objects for the modest Vaughn family. Mary could not resist the thought that the same monetary value might have represented to them some additional comfort and pleasure. While Bonnie's gift from Foster, as compared with her own small check, gave her a vague feeling of resentment. Mary knew that she would not have accepted more for her employer and, that as his wife, Bonnie was entitled to anything that Foster's wealth could provide, but the scales didn't seem to balance right, to her way of thinking. She thought of Bonnie's idle, useless days of continual extravagance and her own diligent hours and mental concern for Foster's affairs, by which, indirectly, the means was provided for her sister's luxury. After all, she was still working to provide for Bonnie, she thought with ironic amusement. And while Bonnie drove in her luxurious car, Mary rode the subway and ferry.

RED CROSS FOUNDER SUBJECT OF SKETCH FOR ANNIVERSARY

Appropriate to the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the American Red Cross Thursday, Clara Barton Payne, founder, is the subject of an interesting sketch appearing in the May 19 issue of the "Red Cross Courier" received by Miss Emma F. Lyon, executive secretary of Greene County chapter. The story was written by Eleanor Barnes, whose grandfather was a personal friend of Miss Barton.

Clara Barton was born in North Oxford, Mass., and during the Civil War voluntarily offered her services as a nurse and soon was known as "the angel of the battlefields." Then when the Spanish American War broke out Miss Barton again volunteered her services and served on the battlefields in Cuba doing the same thing she had done in the Civil War.

Practically all the training "angel of the battlefields" received came during her early childhood for she first learned of the suffering attendant upon warfare from her father, who fought under Mad Anthony Wayne; from her mother she learned to cook; from her brother she learned to ride horseback so that during the Civil War she was able to make more than one perilous journey in a saddle.

Clara Barton's birthplace at Oxford, Mass., has been bought by the women of the Universalist Churches of the entire country and is open as a museum for visitors. During the summer the old farm becomes a free camp for girls who can afford no other. Thus Clara Barton's spirit of service for others lives on.

HIS LAST STUNT

Traveling at nearly 300 miles per hour, Charles (Speed) Holman, veteran airplane daredevil, met death in the game which brought him fame—stunting—when his plane crashed to the ground before 20,000 spectators at the Omaha air races, Omaha, Neb. His plane failed to come out of a barrel roll.

The Theater

Reports of those who previewed "A Free Soul" have wrecked whatever hopes Lionel Barrymore may have had of going back to his directing.

Electrified by the praise given the veteran actor's performance, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer already has assigned him to the lead in "Guilty Hands," a mystery picture to be written and directed by Bayard Veiller. The author of "The Trial of Mary Dugan" now is completing the script and it will be in production before long.

Previous to "A Free Soul," Barrymore hadn't acted since "The Mysterious Island." He directed several pictures, the best known tiger hunt has arrived at the United Artists studio. It is 20,000 feet, and includes most of the adventure. Doug's intent is to make a picture of a series of shorts from this celluloid record of his travels. If he succeeds he will have better luck than Norman Foster, of Paramount, whose travel films are still waiting for a taker. Next year's program of United Artists calls for one picture each for Dugan and Mary. Their friends expect them to come back from Europe with ideas for these pictures.

After all the talk, Ann Harding's new contract with Pathe isn't signed. The deadlock is substantially where it was two months ago. It is said, matters of salary are agreed upon, but the star objects to certain restrictive clauses. Now that Hiram Brown and David Sarnoff are in Hollywood, it is likely the disputed points will be ironed out.

Unless she signs the new contract, Ann will not make "The Little Flat in a Temple" or "Devotion" as it is now called. She thinks the story is all right if she is to do four pictures a year, but wants a stronger vehicle if she completes the old contract. This specifies no definite number but gives her voice in picking the stories.

Meanwhile her disagreement with Charles Rogers continues to be a friendly one. Preparations are going right on for the filming of "Devotion" and the studio seems perfectly satisfied the new contract will be signed.
